DEEP MOURNING.

A sad necessity is upon those of us who have lost relations in battle—that is, the mourning which we all make with plumes, ribbons, and veils, and which is so much a part of our life. To some women it is a relief, to some a burden, to some a necessity. To some women it is a relief, to some a burden, to some a necessity. To some women it is a relief, to some a burden, to some a necessity.

But the question of mourning has become of great importance. We are considering it, because the casualty list will have the effect of radiating the whole Commonwealth, and visibly so when the relations of the fallen appear in the columns of the press. This desire to show respect for the dead and grief at the loss of a loved one is a natural feeling, and is a part of our life.

But as a matter of fact, mourning is out of fashion, and that is final. The dislike of "deep" display, widow's weeds, and "weeping" has grown into a dislike of mourning. It is a fact, and it is a fact, and it is a fact.

Now that the days are shortening, we get a chance to do many little odds and ends in the house, put off while the weather and bright sunlight tempt us out of doors. Although knitting and sewing for our troops still occupy us perhaps even more than when the war first began, yet for a little relaxation we do some of the things which are always to be done in the way of amusements.

PENKLOPE'S WEEKLY NOTES.

Plush is both plentiful and good at present, and the housekeeper will do well to introduce into her menu at least once or twice a week while the cold weather continues. The shop windows and roadside barrows, baskets, or stands of the fishmongers are now particularly well-stocked with excellent whiting. These fish are at their very best in the winter season—delicately flavoured, and with their flesh in perfect condition. Moreover, they keep well now, and so may be cleaned, thoroughly dried, and set away in a cool larder to be cooked for breakfast. Many housekeepers, however, there is only one way of dealing with whiting, and that is to fry them. But they are very good, especially for invalids or people with poor digestion, either steamed and served with anchovy sauce, or simmered in milk, with a strip of lemon peel, a few peppercorns, and some more, for ten minutes. The milk should afterwards be made into white sauce and poured over the fish. This latter method of dealing with it has the very essence of the fish retained and not dispersed by the process of cooking.

Many people may fancy that whiting and onions would not be a happy combination, but the milk should afterwards be made into white sauce and poured over the fish. This latter method of dealing with it has the very essence of the fish retained and not dispersed by the process of cooking.

A TIGHT CORNER.

The game was a very engrossing one, and lasted all the afternoon until the keeper had grown very impatient to shut the gates and grumbled as they went past that it was too past the proper closing hour. And when they parted Erid, flushed and smiling, and nappier than she had ever thought to be again, to come home with her big, big horse, which flot buoyant confidence had given her.

Love's richest gift, perhaps.

E.R.R. (Daplo).—Partridge Wyandotte, like the all and other varieties of this breed, originated in America. The Daplo was produced by crossing with the Partridge Cochins. Two pens competed at the first Hawthornby College competition. The first egg for the first bird was the other remained last with but 80 eggs per pen, and 100 per competed. The Under-Secretary for Agriculture, Poultry-breeders have had no relief from the Necessary Commodities Commission. Poor farmers read in the papers that the Government selling price for wheat is 10d per bushel, but not a farthing sound can be heard. The Government is also unobtainable. Slight relief, however, was afforded last week by the arrival of two big shipments of maize, which, although not of such feed value as wheat, is a welcome substitute.

The hon. secretary of the National Poultry and Cattery Association, Mr. J. H. Piers, has issued the schedule for the fifth annual show to be held in the Municipal Markets, Queen's street. The prize list is an extensive one.

Many thousands of fowls are now really good city birds, but it is surprising how few really good birds are available. The Friday's auction run from 3000 head in some rooms to six or seven thousand in others, and twenty or thirty pairs of heavy cockerels are the limit in any room. These fetch 7/6, and the best of the lot are sold at 10/6. This is a better paying proposition than breeding the best of the latter, and

Many people thought that the difficulty of procuring fowls' food would have a serious effect on the incubator trade. While the demand will be considerably less than in the last year, there is no doubt that the evidence of a fair business can be done. Some of the old ones already making daily sales, who are in the American make two shipments are ready on the way.

In poultry it is generally recognized that the influences of the parents on the progeny differ, and as a rule the male bird influences the shape and outward appearance, while the female controls the temper, habits, size, and constitution. It is, perhaps, in the two last

BULLDOG FROM ENGLAND. "Hotspur" writes: All going well, Australia will soon be able to boast of a bulldog that is more than capable of holding his own with the world's best. Mr. Saul of Melbourne, has completed a very successfulbourne, has completed a very successful heavy-tongued brindle dog, Kilburn Duke bred by Mr. Schlaferman, the noted English breeder. Many English experts pronounce this dog to be the best of the breed seen here at the show benches for the past 10 years. The bulldog carried all before him at the recent Bulldogs Club exhibition. Shetland (about £200) paid by Mr. Saul to the club, and the record for a dog coming to Australia.

No other breed of dog in Australia progressed as rapidly as the bulldog. This is largely due to the fostering influence of the Specialist Clubs in Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide, the members of which have spent freely in importing good specimens of the breed.

Children Going to School

are very liable to catch cold. They have to go in all weathers—often having to sit in school with wet feet. Apart from this, they are always face to face with the risk from infection—especially when Epidemics of Whooping Cough, Measles, Diphtheria, Influenza, &c., are about. Mothers of school boys and girls, however, can be always free of anxiety if they have a bottle of in the house, as one dose of this medicine at the first indication of a "Cold" will at once "nip in the bud" what might otherwise prove to be a serious illness. Cork the bottle up; the rest will keep.

ITALY AND THE WAR.

First Shots Fired.

SHIPS AND AEROPLANES ACTIVE.

FOUR THOUSAND AUSTRIANS DESERT.

The entrance of Italy into the war has led to remarkable demonstrations of enthusiasm throughout the country.

Austrian artillery fired on Italian outposts on the River Adige, and Austrian ships have bombarded several points between Venice and Barletta.

Four thousand Austrian troops deserted, and have been interned in Northern Italy.

Italy has seized all the Austrian and German vessels in Italian ports. They are 80 in number, and are valued at £4,000,000.

Austrians are terrorising the Italian population in the towns and villages in the Trentino.

It is reported that Roumania is now negotiating with the Allies.

There are indications that a great Russian advance is about to begin. The Germans are now on the defensive.

The German Emperor is reported to have left Jaroslavl, journeying westward, in the deepest dejection.

Further British and French successes are reported from the western theatre of the war.

UNITED ITALY.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

FIRST ACTS OF WAR.

ROME, May 25. Enthusiasm among the populace at the news of Italy's decision for war is unbounded. Bells are pealing, and processions are being held in every town.

The majority of the men of various ages are joining the forces.

Many offices, factories, and shops are already shut of hands.

The tramways and other public services have been interrupted, and are being partly by hand.

Amateur and professional soldiers have been enrolled in the Red Cross.

A strict censorship has been established, and the publication of casualty lists and accounts of naval and military operations is prohibited.

Count Cadorna, Chief of the General Staff, has gone to the front, and it is believed that he will command the armies in the field, with General Ferra as his Chief of Staff.

The first act of war between Austria and Italy was when Austrian artillery shelled Italian outposts on the River Adige. The Italians did not reply.

It is expected that the first big engagement will take place on the banks of the Adige.

Austrian torpedo-boat destroyers, bombarded several points between Venice and Barletta, but were everywhere repulsed.

The revolving bridge of Salsomaggiore was bombarded and eight of the troops killed.

The Austrians bombarded Ancona for an hour, damaging the railway station and several buildings in the town and killing several civilians.

An Italian destroyer destroyed the quay at Portofino and sank some motor boats, killing or taking prisoners fifty Austrians.

It is officially announced that Austrian aeroplanes bombarded Porto Corsini and the railway near Ancona.

Italian aircraft guns, with an aeroplane and dirigible, drove them off. Little damage was done.

Austrian aeroplanes also attacked the coast at Venice, but were speedily driven off.

AUSTRIAN TROOPS DESERT.

ROME, May 24. Four thousand Austrian troops, who complained of starvation, deserted. They have been interned in Northern Italy.

THE AUSTRIAN OFFENSIVE.

PARIS, May 24. An Italian communiqué states that it was anticipated that the Austrians would declare the offensive would be taken against the Adriatic shores, with a view to naval effect, rather than military or anti-aircraft. Means have been taken to effectively repel attacks.

SEIZURE OF ENEMY VESSELS.

ROME, May 24. The value of the 80 Austrian and German vessels seized by Italy is said to be £4,000,000.

AMBASSADORS LEAVE ROME.

NO DISTURBANCES.

LONDON, May 25. Prince von Bülow, the German Ambassador, and Baron Mochow, the Austrian Ambassador, have left Rome together with the Austrian and Bavarian Ministers to the Vatican.

There were no disturbances.

GERMAN SPIES.

DISGUISED AS WOMEN.

ROME, May 25. Five German spies were arrested on a ship at Bologna. They were disguised as women, but their clumsy gait led to their arrest.

KING OF GREECE.

THE CRISIS PASSED.

ATHENS, May 25. The condition of King Constantine is improving. The crisis has now passed.

THE RUSSIANS.

GREAT PROGRESS.

ATTACK DEVELOPING.

PETROGRAD, May 25. The following communiqué has been issued: Our northern front, along the Luga-Dubissa (a tributary of the Viena) is making great progress towards the west of Sulpsa.

We have forced the enemy to adopt the defensive along the whole front in Galicia.

Our offensive on the left bank of the Dniester has developed with great success. We have captured 40 officers and 2,200 men, several machine guns, and much material.

GERMANY'S TASK.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

DEJECTED EMPEROR.

LONDON, May 25. The Petrograd correspondent of the "Daily News" states that the German Emperor on Saturday left Jaroslavl, journeying westward, in the deepest dejection. Marshal von Hindenburg warned him that the plan for a terrific blow on a short front looked well on paper, but the Russians were likely to entangle the troops for several weeks.

General von Mackensen and von Emmrich, the correspondent declares, have now abandoned the hopeless task of extricating the Germans along their two hundred miles front.

The Germans, he adds, have no troops to resist the Russian advance in the Pilsna region, where thousands of prisoners are being taken daily.

It is unofficially stated that immense accumulations of shells at Ypres for the advance have not decreased, that the Germans are obliged to economise, their advantage having immediately vanished.

GROSS CRUELITIES.

MORE GERMAN BARBARITIES.

PETROGRAD, May 24. Having failed to secure a swift victory in Galicia, the Germans are credited with gross cruelties. They drowned a party of prisoners in the San, and officers shot five prisoners with their revolvers.

BRITISH CABINET.

LORD FISHER AT THE ADMIRALTY.

LONDON, May 25. It is expected that the new Cabinet will be announced to-night.

It is definitely stated that Lord Fisher will take charge of the Admiralty.

The "Daily News" states that Lord Fisher signed all the documents relating to the Dardanelles, and the War Council took account of his approval when undertaking the scheme.

"The members of the late Cabinet feel," the paper adds, "that if Lord Fisher did not approve of the character of the expedition he should have spoken earlier."

ROUMANIA.

NEGOTIATING WITH ALLIES.

LONDON, May 25. The "Daily Chronicle" Bucharest correspondent states that the Roumanian Government is negotiating with the Allies, and great enthusiasm prevails.

THE TIME FOR ACTION.

DR. DILLON'S VIEWS.

LONDON, May 25. Dr. E. J. Dillon, the "Daily Telegraph" correspondent, telegraphing from Rome, states that Italy's decision, coupled with the consolidation of the Russian forces in the Carpathians, should have the effect of sweeping away all doubt and hesitation on the part of Roumania.

He adds, it would turn the recent Austro-German successes in the Carpathians into a terrible disaster.

POISONOUS GAS.

GERMAN NIGHT ATTACK.

LONDON, May 25. Sir John French reports: "Our garrison on the 24th silenced three German batteries, one being destroyed by direct hits, and the ammunition blown up."

At night the Germans developed an infantry attack east of Ypres, under cover of poisonous gas, and we were forced to evacuate trenches.

Fighting continues, and we have already retaken some of the trenches.

SUPERSEDED.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE.

GENEVA, May 24. No official agency has reported the movements of the Crown Prince of Germany in the army for some time.

It is asserted that he has been superseded. His blunders began by overruling the advice of senior officers at the battle of the Marne.

PRISONERS IN GERMANY.

BRITISH OFFICERS.

LONDON, May 24. It is officially stated that Mr. W. H. Page, United States Ambassador, has communicated to Sir Edward Grey the German War Minister's announcement that four British officers at Frankfurt, Carlsruhe, and Tübingen will be interned at one place. They will be allowed to mutually communicate during periods for exercise, but 30 officers will now receive the food supplies to soldiers.

TORPEDOED.

NORWEGIAN STEAMER.

LONDON, May 25. The Norwegian steamer Minerva has been torpedoed in the North Sea.

THE NEW THEATRE OF WAR.

The above map shows Porto Corsini, Salsomaggiore, Ancona, and Barletta, on the Adriatic, which are the first Italian towns to hear the sound of Austrian shells in the present war. Porto Buso, the Austrian port near the Italian frontier which was shelled by an Italian destroyer, is also shown.

IN THE WEST.

LORETTE HEIGHTS CAPTURED.

PARIS, May 24. An official statement has been issued as follows:

The capture of the white road, giving the mastery of the Notre Dame de Lorette heights, was a magnificent victory. During the thirteen days' fierce battles we killed on the plateau and in the defensive works upwards of 3,000 of the enemy. We captured 1,000 prisoners.

The body was only a small portion of the captures, inasmuch as daily we were finding machine guns, trench mortars, and rifles concealed in filled-up trenches and collapsed shelters.

The carrying of the Notre Dame de Lorette heights achieves one of our principal objectives northward of Arras. The German army believed themselves to be impregnable. Fresh troops, relieved by the defenders, nevertheless, they were driven out by our superiority in tactics, which unmistakably confirmed our troops, and more than ever strengthened our belief in final victory.

BRITISH PROGRESS.

NORTH OF LA BASSEE.

PARIS, May 25. The following communiqué has been issued: The British have progressed north of La Bassee.

The Germans, with very heavy forces, attempted to attack north of Neuville, but were caught under our artillery, and the attack stopped dead, the enemy sustaining heavy losses.

BATTLE OF RICHEBOURG.

A THRILLING STORY.

LONDON, May 25. A letter from a British officer describes the battle of Richebourg, which took place between May 9 and 17.

The Russian, Northampton, Munster, and the Black Watch opened the attack, but met with a heavy fire, which was totally unexpected.

After a bombardment which equalled that of Neuve Chapelle, the Munsters and the Black Watch seized the trenches, but were shortly afterwards driven out.

Reserves were called up on the 9th for a fresh attack, the reserves including the Worcesters, the Buffs, and the Buffs, the King's Royal Rifles, and a Liverpool regiment.

By 10 o'clock in the evening four lines of men were lying in the open in front of the trenches, and others were in the trenches behind.

The attackers rose at 11.30, and in the pitch darkness went forward in a walk. They had hardly started when a flare went up from the German trenches. The men continued walking. Other flares followed and then there was a hail of lead.

The men dashed ahead. The King's Rifles and the Buffs soon won the first trench, and then went on to the second, but the Worcesters found the task impossible.

The Buffs pushed on, line after line, despite terrible losses, and won the first trench. They immediately made for the second, which they captured.

The three successful regiments joined up at dawn.

Many heroes in the British trenches during the day shouldered boxes of bombs and handbags of ammunition, and attempted to dash across the three hundred yards to the German trench. Many fell, but some got across.

All the trenches were subjected to a terrific bombardment, and the wounded suffered terribly. It was impossible to move them until dark.

On Monday the Oxfordshires and Highland Light Infantry pushed on and won more ground.

The advance continues.

CARENCY.

FIGHT IN A CELLAR.

PARIS, May 25. Extraordinary details have been received regarding the clearing out of the Germans from Carency, which was captured house by house.

In one case thirty-two Frenchmen found twenty Germans with fixed bayonets in a cellar, which already contained piles of German dead, and a death struggle commenced, all fighting like fends.

Sometimes a Prussian pretended to go mad. He threw down his revolver, tore off his tunic, and rushed out with it.

After 40 minutes not one German remained alive. Most of the French were wounded, but 28 of them are alive.

DARDANELLES.

200,000 TURKS.

TERRIFIC FIGHTING.

STRUGGLE RAFFLES DESCRIPTION.

ATHENS, May 25. The Turks have been largely reinforced with men and guns. Over 200,000 Turks are now opposing the Allies.

The main Turkish reserves are on the Asiatic shores, and are sent across the Narrows as each attack fails.

The enemy's fleet is active, and is trying to shell our positions by indirect fire from sheltered parts in the Narrows.

The struggle in the southern portion of the peninsula baffles description. Sometimes, simultaneously, there are attacks in all directions.

The peninsula looks like an inferno of shrieking shells.

It is estimated that the Turkish losses number 80,000.

NIGHT FIGHTING.

ALLIES ORGANISING THEIR POSITIONS.

LONDON, May 25. Reuters' Tenedos correspondent, telegraphing on the 23rd, states that the Allies are organising their positions.

The Turks continue night fighting, despite its disastrous results.

The Allies have already reached some of the houses at Kithia, but the machine guns make it impossible to hold the village.

DETAILS FROM CAIRO.

GERMANS IN AUSTRALIAN UNIFORMS.

CAIRO, May 25. It is narrated that the Turks were less prepared to meet the Australian and New Zealanders than they were in the engagement at Seddih Bahr, but directly the colonials obtained a footing three divisions rushed up.

One Australian, renowned for his height and strength, jumped into a Turkish trench and bayoneted five Turks in quick succession, hurling each one out of the trench at the end of his bayonet. He afterwards said it was as easy as tossing him.

The New Zealanders came to the relief of the Australians at a critical moment, and their co-operation resulted in the British position being maintained.

German officers moved freely among the troops in the uniforms of Australian and New Zealand officers. One of them prevented a company of New Zealanders from firing during the greater part of the night. He spoke perfect English, and said the French would come to reinforce them, and were digging a trench near by. "Keep quiet and don't fire," he added.

Later his identity was discovered, and he was taken to the trench and shot.

The Australian Light Horse have volunteered to go to the Dardanelles as infantry.

CASUALTIES.

NEW ZEALAND.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday. KILLED IN ACTION.

and it is only by this concerted pressure on all sides that the force can be kept divided and so, eventually, overcome.

THE GALICIAN SITUATION.

In concluding our review of the Galician situation in this column on Monday we remarked: "There is now room for the belief that the remaining strength of the Austro-German army will break itself upon the Russian resistance in vain, and that the end of the great battle will see Przemysl still in the Grand Duke's hands." It is gratifying to note that events seem to be fully bearing out that view.

We based our conclusion largely on the fact that the Germans were withdrawing troops from their centre in the Jaroslavl region in order to reinforce their extreme left, which the Russian counter-offensive was threatening. As they had failed with their full strength in the centre to gain complete mastery of the eastern bank of the San, then the lessening of that full strength necessarily indicated that further efforts in that direction would not be made with any increased promise of success.

The official communiqué from Petrograd this morning states definitely that the Russians have forced the enemy on to the defensive almost throughout the whole Galician front; and there is no reason whatever why we should not accept that statement, especially in view of the complete official silence on the other side. For the moment, the main interest centres upon the Russian offensive in the region just north of the Vistula. We have already emphasised the importance of such a move, if it has any big strength behind it, and we would give much to believe that the Germans were already planned down by the Russians; but, unfortunately, this is not the case.

The Russian offensive on the north has not yet developed to such an extent as to offer an immediate menace to the German line of communication, and the Germans have, for the present, a perfectly clear field behind them over which, if the worst comes to the worst, from their point of view, they can fight a rearguard battle. They have had to fight such a battle on previous occasions in country less well served by railways than the one in which they now find themselves, and there is no reason to suppose that they cannot do so again. If the Russians can envelop the German left, and drive down into Galicia, east of Cracow, then the retreat would undoubtedly be fraught with very great hazard—but that has certainly not happened yet.

AN OPTIMISTIC CORRESPONDENT.

If we were to accept unreservedly the whole despatch of the correspondent referred to above, then the great German force in Galicia is in a somewhat perilous position. It is suggested that von Hindenburg warned the Emperor against a terrific blow upon a short front, but that his impetuous Majesty overruled him, and the thrust was made. Then followed a remarkable sentence, and he said: "General von Mackensen and von Emmich have now abandoned the hopeless task of extricating the Germans from their 200-mile front." The words "extricating" would lead one to believe that the Germans were already badly planned down by the Russians; but, unfortunately, this is not the case.

The Russian offensive on the north has not yet developed to such an extent as to offer an immediate menace to the German line of communication, and the Germans have, for the present, a perfectly clear field behind them over which, if the worst comes to the worst, from their point of view, they can fight a rearguard battle. They have had to fight such a battle on previous occasions in country less well served by railways than the one in which they now find themselves, and there is no reason to suppose that they cannot do so again. If the Russians can envelop the German left, and drive down into Galicia, east of Cracow, then the retreat would undoubtedly be fraught with very great hazard—but that has certainly not happened yet.

THE BISHOP'S APPEAL.

FOR COMPULSORY SERVICE.

LONDON, May 25. The Bishop of Pretoria, in a letter to the "Times," after a month's visit to the army in Northern France and Flanders, appeals to the nation to adopt compulsory service.

The troops, he says, think the nation is not backing them up. "I could and should," they feel, "that the ignorance and apathy at home are needlessly increasing their danger and losses."

After fighting desperately day and night for weeks, and suffering frightful loss, the men are dog-tired, yet they are sent back to the firing-line after three days' rest. They naturally conclude that there are not enough troops available.

Battalion after battalion in the Ypres salient had to sit in the trenches and be surrounded by German high explosives with no guns capable of keeping down the German fire. Naturally, they conclude that the nation has failed to provide sufficient guns and ammunition. Similarly I find that the Germans are ready to answer every British bomb with five or ten bombs, and the troops know of it.

It is little short of murder to ask men, however full of the right spirit, to face an enemy amply equipped with big guns and the right ammunition unless they are equipped with equally effective munitions.

DARDANELLES.

TURKISH ATTACKS REPULSED.

ATHENS, May 25. The Allies have repulsed the latest Turkish attacks and resumed the offensive. Fresh troops have been landed, and the bombardment of the straits continues.

GERMAN ADMIRAL IN CHARGE.

OF ENEMY'S DEFENCES.

LONDON, May 25. A German wireless message states that 90,000 British and French troops have been landed in the Dardanelles.

The defence of the Dardanelles has been entrusted to Admiral von Uexküll, who was once in command of the Emperor's yacht Hohenzollern.

TRIPOLI.

TURKS AND GERMANS BUSY.

ROME, May 25. German and Turkish officers have gone to Tripoli and Cyrenaica, with money and gifts for the chiefs, hoping to raise an insurrection.

BOMBARDMENT.

AUSTRIAN ATTACK ON ANCONA.

LONDON, May 25. Details of the bombardment of Ancona by the Austrians state that ten torpedo-boats and destroyers bombarded the port for 40 minutes, and were then obliged to retire towards Lissa.

BOMBS ON PARIS.

TAUBE AEROPLANES.

PARIS, May 25. Two Taube aeroplanes flew over Paris, one going northward. The two dropped fifty bombs.

SIR EDGAR SPEYER.

STATE PARLIAMENT.

The Cabinet yesterday further considered the programme of measures to be dealt with during the session which opens on June 11. In the interval the Premier will attend the Federal Labour Conference in Adelaide, leaving Sydney on Thursday, and on his return the caucus will consider the proposed list of bills to be submitted by the Government.

MURDER CHARGE FAILS

ADOLLAIDE, Thursday. — The charge was entered of the trial of Harold E. Murray on a charge of having murdered his father, near Burma, on March 16. After Mr. Justice Murray had summed up, the jury retired. At the end of two and a half hours an agreement was announced. His Honor declined to discharge the jury. He remarked that the case had already occupied 11 or 12 hours and it would be lamentable if it had to be tried again.

The jury were asked to retire again. After one and a half hour they returned. The verdict was one of not guilty, and accused was acquitted.
